FDR Names Byrnes Economic Director, Freezes Wages, Prices as of Sept. 15

JUSTICE GIVEN JOB OF SAVING U. S. STABILITY

Resigns Supreme Court Post, Gets Full Control of Anti-Inflation Task.

RENT FREEZE ORDERED

President, Moving Fast, Tells OPA to Fix Rent Ceiling Throughout Nation.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt today named Associate Justice James F Byrnes of the supreme court to be director of economic stabilization with full control over the anti-inflation program

At the same time the president ordered wages salaries and farm prices stabilized at Sept 15 levels in accordance with the new law which he signed last night.

He ordered Price Administrator Leon Henderson to fix rent ceilings throughout the entire United States, including urban and rural communities alike.

Mr. Roosevelt accepted Byrnes' resignation from the high court shortly before he announced the appointment The series of steps taken to stabilize the cost of living came simultaneously with the appointment

Henderson also was instructed to establish ceilings on all agriculture commodities not covered by the original price control, and was ordered to determine all ceilings in a manner that would prevent unreasonable or exorbitant profits.

The presidential executive order establishing an office of economic stabilization, with Byrnes at its head, also provided for the appointment of a board including the secretaries of treasury, agriculture, commerce and labor, the federal reserve board chairman, budget director price administrator, head of the National War Labor Board, and two representatives each of labor, management and agriculture This board will work with Director Byrnes.

Another order gave the National War Labor Board the actual mechanical job of controlling wages and salaries and ordered that no increases in salaries which now are in excess of $5,000 a year be approved by the board unless otherwise determined by the director.

The war labor board also will not approve any salary that exceeds a net $25 000, a provision which Mr. Roosevelt sought unsuc-

N-J Carrier Boys Proud of $91,500 War Stamp Sales

Celebrating today as "national newspaperboy day" News-Journal carriers and sellers by evening will have boosted their total war stamp sales to approximately $91,500 since inaugurating the plan Jan. 17.

This represents the distribution of nearly a million 10-cent stamps by the youthful merchants who bring your daily paper to your door or sell you a copy on the street. With 170 sellers this means a weekly output of 20,000 to 30,000 stamps.

In the nation-wide observance of Newspaper Week, publishers today honored the boys who shout the headlines from street corners or who quietly cover the routes, taking time out to sell $50,000,000 worth of stamps along with their papers.

Over the country 300,000 newspaperboys are engaged in the 10-cent stamp sale. The plan was conceived by the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin and is supervised by the International Circulation Managers association.

President Roosevelt has expressed his delight over such a novel plan for co-operation with the national war effort. Each boy who attains his sales goal will be awarded a Treasury department "honorable discharge" but generally the News-Journal carriers and sellers say they will continue selling and winning service stripes.

DEFENDS TIRE RATION BOARD

County Chairman Says Federal Rules Must Be Heeded On Farm Applications.

The policy of the Richland county rationing board in allocating tires to farmers is set up by the federal government and not by the county group, Nelson Neff, chairman of the county rationing board said today in reply to an attack on the board's policy yesterday by E B Kallmeyer who resigned from the board.

Kallmeyer charged that the "attitude taken by the board in regard to the farmer is not sound or conducive to best interests of all our people in the war effort"

Neff pointed out today that the county tire rationing panel of three members must follow instructions in allocating tires and is no permitted to give farmers permits to buy new tires. Farmers, however, are eligible for recaps if they can show they need tires in their work, Neff said

"We have no desire to engage in a controversy about this thing for all of us are in it to get along the best we can and win the war," Neff asserted.

U. S. PASSES UP AIRPORT, CITY STILL HOPING

Aeronautics Authority Allows $4,428,000 For Improvement Of 4 Ohio Fields.

HELD 'NON-ESSENTIAL'

Harrington Disputes Claim Mansfield Not Needed For War Program.

Efforts to obtan federal financial aid for the improvement of Mansfield airport had suffered a sharp setback today, but leaders in the improvement campaign refused to give up

Mansfield's airport was passed over yesterday as the Civil Aeronautics authority in Washington appropriated $4 128 000 for improvement of four Ohio airports

The grants included $2 000 000 for Canton, $900 000 for Wilmington $660 000 for Columbus and $868 000 for Zanesville

The reason Mansfield was passed up, according to Representative J. Harry McGregor, was that the field here was not "absolutely essential to the war program."

On learning that no appropriation had been made for the Mansfield port McGregor protested to Col L P Whitten, director of base services for the army air forces

He learned the Associated Press reported from Washington, that the government appropriations had been reviewed by the secretaries of war, navy and commerce

They apparently had approved the finding that Mansfield was not essential to the war program

However, McGregor held out a ray of hope, dim though it seemed

He said that the Mansfield port might "later" be considered vital to the war effort

The decision on Mansfield's importance was not explained by the army

It seemed to Mansfield observers, however, somewhat strange in view of the fact that flight training schools are being operated here by James R Hartington operator of the field for both Decision In Ringside Case Still Pending; Mayor Evades Questions.

Announcement was made in Columbus today that no decision will be reached by the state liquor board of control before Monday on charges that liquor was sold to a minor at John Hergatt's Ringside cafe, 28 East Third street

While man-in-the-street conversations continued critical of the action of Mayor W J Locke who in a letter to the board declared there had been no complaints against the Ringside, no official expressions were heard at city hall

The mayor's letter, which he admitted he sent without request from the state liquor board, was submitted at Hergatt's hearing in Columbus Wednesday It drew from Harry E Hawley, board chairman, the statement that "the board has had plenty of complaints about this place."

Like yesterday, The News-Journal was still unable to contact the mayor for an interview on the subject today

After he first admitted sending the letter, Mayor Locke told a News-Journal reporter seeking to question him further, that

"I'd prefer that in the future you would not ask me any questions requiring answers of interest to The News-Journal

Score Success As Siege Goes Into 40th Day

Red Communiques Reflect Glimmer of Optimism as Troops Continue to Take Tremendous Toll of Nazi Forces Before Stalingrad.

(By Associated Press)

The 40-day-old siege of Stalingrad verged on the turning point today as the Red armies cut deeper into the vital German flank north of the city, seizing a powerfully fortified hilltop, and again forced the Nazis to retreat in bloody street fighting inside the Volga metropolis.

German field headquarters acknowledged that the Russians were launching strong relief attacks both north and south of the city but declared they "failed after heavy fighting."

The Nazi command also asserted that the German drive in the northwest suburbs "everywhere achieved all objectives set for yesterday" It did not specify these objectives.

Far to the north, on the Lake Ladoga front around Leningrad, the German high command reported the destruction of seven encircled Russian divisions—perhaps 100,000 troops—and the capture of 12,370 Red army prisoners

A Nazi communique said a recent series of battles below the lake had ended in "complete success."

But the grim struggle for Stalingrad continued to overshadow other developments on the long fighting front

Our troops forged through clearing individual buildings of the enemy,' the Soviet command announced, referring to an inner city zone

'Stubborn fighting continues"

For the first time, Russian field dispatches reflected at least a shade of optimism as Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's troops took the initiative in sector after sector.

Red Star declared the Germans were losing 2,000 to 3,000 killed daily.

On the northern flank, where the Red armies have been slashing at a 40-mile barrier guarding the main Nazi siege forces, the Russians reported they had stormed and captured a strategic height where the Germans had buried damaged tanks as firing-points.

German military quarters admitted late yesterday that the main weight of the battle had now shifted to the north, implying that they had been compelled to withdraw troops from the inner city to combat the Soviet counter-offensive.

As the Germans rushed to block the Russian drive from the north, a Soviet guard division struck against a flank on the invasion wedge inside Stalingrad and compelled the Nazis to retreat, leaving several hundred dead and prisoners

Fierce hand-to-hand fighting continued to rage in the city's streets Soviet correspondents reported

Soviet headquarters acknowledged a minor reverse south of the city, where Russian troops

LAVAL SURVIVES CABINET CRISIS

Reported to Have Taken Strong Stand Against Forcing of Labor Out of Country.

BULLETIN

ON THE FRENCH FRONTIER —(UP)— German authorities in Paris, it was reported from France today, have already deported 6,000 persons, most of them Jews, and are rounding up thousands more hostages in an unsuccessful attempt to halt growing wave of anti-Nazi bombings and attacks in Paris.

(By United Press)

ON THE FRENCH FRONTIER —Premier Pierre Laval was reported today to have emerged safely from the severest cabinet crisis of his regime after taking a strong stand with the Germans against use of force by the Vichy government to mobilize French workers for the Reich

Laval, according to this report, was supported by Marshal Henri Philippe Petain and other members of his government in the stand against using outright compulsion to force French labor to go to Germany.

It was said that despite the new Vichy labor decree giving the government the right to assign labor to any task necessary to the national interest this statute would not be employed for purposes of outright conscription of French labor for the Reich.

Laval promised the Germans, however that he would do his utmost to increase the voluntary migration of French labor to Germany.

(A dispatch from Vichy said a

Enemy Propaganda

Dispatches and pictures from capitals of warring nations are subject to censorship. Propaganda is the motive behind most statements, especially those from capitals of enemy powers and their satellites. Don't confuse rumors, reports and claims with confirmed news.

On the Home and War Fronts

Reports From the Front.

Two exciting and vivid personal reports from Mansfield area men in the thick of the war as being waged from England by the AEF are presented in the Sunday edition.

The reports are in the form of letters—one from Capt. William Odell of Mansfield, who participated in the July 4 raid by American fliers over occupied Holland, and the other from Lieut Clark Garber, jr., of Butler, who tells of a really hair-raising experience while piloting a flying fortress.

On the Home Sector.

The Shape of Things.

You remember that in ancient times there lived in a cave high in the hills outside Athens a weather-beaten old crone known professionally as the Delphic Sibyl, who functioned as a combination prophet and expert. Before every important military campaign or civic reform, the Grecian big shots would consult this lady on how the prospects looked, and except that there was no trio playing balalaika music, the Sibyl's set-up rather resembled the gypsy tea rooms found around Manhattan.

Kilgallen

Unfortunately there is no modern version of the Sibyl functioning in Gotham, though the mythology experts in Lindy's privately claim that Broadway Rose looks a lot like her. A Broadway-wise oracle could do the entertainment business a pile of good, predicting the flop shows and advising which new night clubs are sure-fire turkeys. If such a character existed, this would be her big season, for the theaters are blooming, the cafe owners are making lofty plans, and an extraordinary amount of folding money is being put into circulation.

In the absence of a regulation Sibyl, this department will pass out its own predictions, based on a careful study of the zodiacal signs, the writings of Nostradamus, Vincent Lopez's star chart, and bitter experience. So wave the magic circle, fellows, and turn down the lights.

In the months to come, James Petrillo will decree that citizens may not sing in the bathtub unless they hold 802 cards . . . David O. Selznick will purchase the film rights to "The Yearling and start a three-year nation-wide search for a deer to play the title role . . . Twenty-seven producers will announce "intimate" musical revues, of which three will reach Broadway—and wish they hadn't . . . George Jean Nathan will discover a new playwright and three new Oriental beauties . . . Night club owners will blame the gas shortage for bad business . . . The very social Miss Gwendoline LaRoo will be named Glamour Girl of 1943 and will bashfully confess (to 1,237 photographers and reporters) that she is a home-loving girl who detests publicity and only frequents night clubs because of a promise to grandma.

Jinx Falkenberg and her entire family will enter the national ping-pong tournament . . . A new South American star, whose English vocabulary is limited to "Hokay, keed," will take the town by storm . . . Gypsy Rose Lee will win the Pulitzer Prize for literature . . . Leon Henderson will announce that, because of war shortages, rationing will have to be rationed . . . James Petrillo will decree that canaries cannot chirp unless they hold 802 cards . . . "Life With Father" will be sold to the movies for more money than there is . . . Sherman Billingsley will bar three exuberant debs from the Stork Club, and their irate parents will take it to the Supreme Court.

Two hit shows will arrive within a week, and the critics will do Sunday pieces on the rebirth of the American theater . . . Ten flops will arrive a week later, and the critics will write Sunday's pieces on the death of the American theater . . . A comedian named Jackie Miles will be hailed as the comedy find of the year . . . The Shuberts' version of the Ziegfeld Follies" and Eugene O'Neill's "The Ice Man Cometh" will be announced for this season . . . Something called the comba will be hailed as the new dance craze, but everybody will continue to do the rhumba . . . The taxi shortage will compel society folks to use the subway and the picture magazines will photograph them doing it. Then they will go back to using taxis . . . Night club owners will blame the silk-stocking shortage for bad business.

William Saroyan will write, direct, produce and act in a new play (with settings by W. Saroyan) and, after the opening night, Saroyan will double as audience . . . The "Ziegfeld Follies" will be postponed until next season . . . Eugene O'Neill's new play will be renamed "The Ice-Man Doesn't Cometh" and withdrawn for rewriting . . . A comedian named Henny Youngman will be hailed as the comedy find of the year.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — It takes all kinds of people. It takes Maria Montez, and Victor Mature, and Maxie Baer and Lupe Velez. And it takes Henry Fonda, and Don Ameche, and Fred MacMurray.

Lupe and Maria—they're the pair. Hoydens, you know. Shrinking violets. Maria makes entrances. Maria laughs and talks, and makes jokes. Maria kids her press-agents, "Any headlines today? NO?" Only she isn't kidding. Lupe jumps around. Lupe sulks. Lupe laughs and yells. Lupe throws things. Lupe is ze hot tamale, but hot, ze gay child of nature, si!

Coons

Victor, there's the one. Victor is the shy little boy who makes a career of boosting Mature and being insufferably Victor. Only he is so frank about it, he makes such a thing of being "the Genius," he is so aware and joyous about every inch of white paper covered with black ink spelling "Mature" — he's so insufferable he turns out to be likeable, after all.

* * *

AND Maxie, the Baer. There's the complete extrovert, the fun-loving Rover boy, loud and generous, loud and palzy-walzy . . . loud.

And then there's Ameche, and Fonda, and MacMurray.

Fonda's the kind of guy who slips down quietly and enlists in the navy without telling anybody anything about it. The kind of guy who keeps a secret without half-trying — just through long practice. After a couple of years you can sort of ease your way into his confidence a little and he'll let loose a line now and then. Once in Hollywood he got bitten by an irresponsible typewriter and maybe he's never gotten completely over it.

Ameche. "How are you?" he says. "Glad to see you." Pleasant and polite. Yes, he's fine. Yes, the picture looks good. No, he doesn't know anything. No, it isn't true that he's taking a mid-western vacation. No, he doesn't know how that one started. Yes. No. Pleasant, polite and friendly.

AND MacMurray, ditto. Heartier about it, though. Not the silent type, he just doesn't wear a subject out:

"What did you do between pictures?" you venture.

"Fished."

"Where did you go?"

"High Sierras."

"Catch anything?"

"Yeah. Just the ordinary."

"Ever do any deep-sea fishing?"

"Makes me sick."

"What about this skeet-shooting? I hear you're a champ."

"Used to be," says Fred, "but I haven't shot in years."

"I'll stay and watch you do a scene."

"Fine," says Fred. "Let's have another talk sometime."

Chatter Corner

Rainwater Inspector Ray Hines declaring he won't believe Mayor W. J. Locke wrote a note to the state liquor board for John Hergatt and the Ringside cafe though the mayor admitted it . . . Councilman George C. Kyle resenting "allegations" that council is tardy on street improvement legislation.

Motorcycle Patrolman Dick Hecht saying that night arrests of speeders means he loses sleep to attend morning court sessions . . . Waterworks office employes wondering if a baby frog frolicking on the money counter jumped out of the nearby drinking fountain.

Miss Mabel Clingan rehearsing her choir for special services at the Christian church Sunday . . . John Simpson Junior high school pupils happy to learn that Principal H. A. Dotson will be able to leave the hospital next week after an operation.

Myrtle Booth checking the membership of the Civic Music association . . . Marjorie Palmer stopping to pick up a friend while driving downtown . . . Katherine Hartman and Eleanor Bond chatting while en route to work.

Major Paul S. Stoodt at home for a short leave . . . John Coleman leaving for Pittsburgh . . . Eric Turner, the sailor from Mansfield, England, leaving for Norfolk, Va., to board ship today after a visit with friends here.

Francis G. Renkenberger being assigned to Bowman field, Texas, for army training and Joseph M. Rachel, another Mansfielder, to Camp Claiborne, La . . . County Commissioner Ray Hout losing an empty milk bottle through a hole in a paper bag he was carrying and picking up the pieces from the courthouse corridor floor.

Friend asking Jack Goft how his baby daughter is . . . Irvin Brune stopping to talk with a friend on Park avenue while on his way down town . . . Mrs. Paul Young, chairman of Senior high school band tag day, remarking that no band mother she called had refused to help her with the annual drive today.

who had wedged into Axis positions made a fighting withdrawal under assault by 50 German tanks. Sixteen of the tanks were reported wrecked.

Along the Black sea coast, Soviet troops still fighting within sight of Novorossisk were credited with wiping out an Axis spearhead, killing 300 Germans and Rumanians.

On the Voronezh front, midway between Stalingrad and Moscow, Soviet tommy-gunners were reported to have broken through German barbed-wire entanglements.

Other developments:

WESTERN AIR WAR — RAF bombers, pressing a round-the-clock offensive, pounded Adolf Hitler's war foundries in the Rhineland last night within a few hours after U. S. flying fortresses scored a spectacular victory over the Luftwaffe by shooting down 13 Focke-Wulf 190's in a raid on northern France. Seven RAF bombers failed to return.

EGYPTIAN FRONT—All quiet.

FAR PACIFIC—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported that steadily advancing Australian troops were nearing the summit of the lofty Owen Stanley mountains in New Guinea today, with still no sign of opposition by retreating Japanese forces.

Military dispatches said the Australians had pushed beyond the mountain hamlet of Menari, 46 airline miles northeast of Port Moresby, and were now within five miles of "the gap" through which they retreated three weeks ago.

Failure of the Japanese to make a stand was attributed chiefly to incessant Allied aerial attacks which have virtually paralyzed the enemy supply lines.

Meanwhile, American flying fortresses ranged across the Coral sea to pound Japanese bases and shipping at New Britain and the Solomon islands.

The fortresses attacked two Japanese cruisers, one of which was believed hit, and set fire to a 15,000-ton enemy transport and another 7,000-ton transport. All the planes returned safely.

Accept Votes of Servicemen Until 6:30 Election Day

The Richland county election board today was requested by Secretary of State John Sweeney to accept absentee ballots from servicemen until the polls close at 6:30 p. m. on election day, Nov. 3.

The board also was instructed to mail absentee ballots to men in the armed forces until the day before election if necessary.

Absentee ballots voted by civilians must be requested before Oct. 29 and mailed back to the election board by noon Oct. 30.

Although servicemen need only to mail a card to the election board to apply for an absentee ballot, only 17 requests had been received today by the board from voters in the armed forces, Clerk Philip Wolfe said.

Absentee ballots for the November election will be available Monday at the election board office in the courthouse. Registered civilian voters who will be away from home election day may mark their ballots at the board headquarters anytime after Monday or request ballots by mail.

The election board today had approved the removal of the voting place in Precinct D of the Fifth ward from the Mitsch store at Central avenue and Orange street to the Sons of Herman hall nearby.

the army and navy, and that pilots trained here go to army bases as instructors.

A unit of the Civil Air Patrol is also located at the Mansfield airport, which is headquarters for a seven-county area covered by the Civil Air Patrol.

Harrington said today that the airport and its training course have been commended by the Naval Air Cadet selection board at Detroit which sends students here for training. The board, he said, had asked the government to place the Mansfield airport on an all-navy basis. That is, it would train navy fliers only.

"I know our airport here has a bigger flight school than Canton," said Harrington. Canton was allocated $2,000,000 yesterday by the CAA for improvements to its port. From 50 to 100 army and navy fliers are being trained here now.

Harrington said he was puzzled at the CAA effort to cooperate in every other way with the airport here and at the same time refuse to grant financial help.

"Seven of the buildings at the CCC camp on state route 39 southeast of Mansfield have been turned over to us for barracks, classrooms, a garage, and a storage building for equipment, but it will cost us about $5,000 to move them to the airport and put them in shape," Harrington said.

He added that some of the buildings will be moved next week.

Harrington said he was "sorry to hear of the decision," but added that he didn't think this was the "final turn-down."

A civilian airport committee, headed by C. G. Hillier, has been in existence in Mansfield three years but so far has made little headway in obtaining government funds for improvement of the airport.

The work of the committee has been done in secrecy at the request of army officials, Hillier said. He added that numerous and consistent efforts have been made to obtain federal funds and he expressed the belief that the city still has a chance of getting assistance from the government for needed airport improvements.

They "should not expect light penalties," Underwood said as he sentenced to five years in prison Donald L. Franz, 18, of Luthersburg, Pa., who stole an auto while AWOL.

ARREST FIVE

State Patrolmen File Excessive Speed Charges.

Five traffic violators were arrested by the state highway patrol last night, two of them charged with exceeding the 35-mile national speed limit by traveling at a rate of 50 miles an hour.

Andrew K. Harbour, Akron resident, was fined $10 and costs in Justice W. A. Wiles court in Lexington for speeding on U. S. Route 42. Herman W. Strouse of Crestline was cited to appear Monday at 9:30 a. m. in Mansfield Municipal Court to answer to charges of speeding on Route 544.

Three persons were arrested for failure to stop at a stop sign on Route 61. All were cited to appear at the court of Justice Armstrong in Shelby. Martin Burkhart of Crestline and John L. Stephens of Bucyrus were scheduled to appear Monday at 1:30 p. m., while LaFay A. West of Crestline, was slated for appearance today.

SWIM POOL AT Y. M. TO OPEN

The swimming pool at the Y. M. C. A., closed for two weeks for redecorating, is scheduled to be ready for use by Tuesday, John Fike, physical director at the Y. M. C. A. said today.

Orange and white are the new colors, the ceiling and sidewalls being painted white with orange trimming. The bottom of the pool was painted yellow.

Six groups including the Senior and Junior Hi-Y clubs, Junior Matines, Friendly Indans, Rangers and Empire Steel boys, use the pool twice a week for a half an hour.

DEFENDS TIRE RATION BOARD

County Chairman Says Federal Rules Must Be Heeded On Farm Applications.

He added that Kallmerten's impression that certain members of the board could receive applications for tires and act on them was incorrect. Kallmerten said he was opposed to the plan because it didn't give the applicant a chance to appear before all the members of the panel to offer his arguments.

"Members of the board in county communities may receive applications for tire permits," Neff said, "but they must submit the requests to the entire panel for approval."

He said the plan was set up to eliminate unnecessary trips to Mansfield from rural communities and thereby help to save tires.

C. N. Shultz, chairman of the county tire rationing panel, supported the views of Neff, adding that "So many other people in essential work are ahead of the farmer on the tire eligibility list that there usually isn't much left for the farmer."

Shultz said doctors, police, officers, firemen, nurses and others receive new tires first.

Neff said the board was looking for a successor for Kallmerten and probably would name one in a few days. Board members serve without pay.

Up and Down THE STREET

Mansfield has a representative in the Lantern freshman beauty parade sponsored by the campus publication at Ohio State university. Miss Clara Ivanich, Oxley Hall resident, is one of the 12 freshmen beauties chosen by a non-partisan board for the parade from a group of 50 coeds selected by special Lantern spotters. The winning coeds were chosen for personality as well as attractiveness. The current edition of The Lantern carried the picture of the parade winners with the notation that "telephone numbers will be issued only to Lantern subscribers."

ONE KILLED FOUR INJURED IN EXPLOSION

Work Halted on Vital Bomb Casings; Loss Placed Near $300,000.

(By United Press)

TIFFIN—A thunderous midnight explosion and the roaring fire that followed destroyed more than half of the Tiffin Art Metal company, halted work on vital bomb casings, killed a woman employe and injured at least four others, police said today.

The body of an unidentified woman was recovered from the charred wreckage early today and firemen continued to poke in the smoldering debris for additional bodies.

Eric Theller, 19, Jack Roberts, 23, David Ryckman, and Ralph Gross all of Tiffin were burned. Theller was in a critical condition at a Tiffin hospital with burns on his back, arms and right leg. He was not expected to live.

The fire started last midnight on the change of shifts. It spread rapidly, enveloping the entire plant in flames before firemen could bring it under control.

The plant, which was on a 24-hour day war production schedule, burned for more than two and a half hours before the blaze was controlled. Only the company warehouse was saved and that "by a miraculous change in the wind," firemen said.

In addition to manufacturing bomb casings the company was preparing to make fire extinguishers for civilian defense organizations.

Unofficial estimates of the loss incurred by the fire at the $500,000 concern was $300,000. The company's warehouse was saved.

The plant, which manufactured fancy sheet metal articles in peace time, was a one-story building located on a railroad spur. It burned to the ground and firemen continued to pour water on the smoldering rubble long after the building had burned.

The plant employed approximately 220 workers, one-third of them women. About 75 workers were employed on each shift, according to John P. Speck of Tiffin, president and general manager of the concern.

City's Churches Join In Communion, Rally Day Services Sunday

Special Programs Arranged for Most Congregations; Herrold, Sunday School Head 35 Years, Retires.

The majority of Mansfield churches along with countless others all over the country will join in the observance of World Wide Communion Sunday during their morning worship services. And many of these same churches are holding Rally day for their Sunday school programs.

This year special emphasis has been placed on these two events. Along with planned musical programs for the day and sermon topics in keeping with the occasion, one Mansfield church has an outstanding feature for tomorrow.

Will G. Herrold, who has been superintendent of the South Main Evangelical Sunday school for 35 years, and has been instrumental in its growth, will preside at his last Rally day service. In the Sunday bulletin, announcing the program, Herrold announced that he would retire from his position as superintendent at the end of the year.

Largely through his work, the Sunday school ranks third largest in Ohio conference and practically third largest in the city. Novel programs arranged by him for Rally days have brought many South Main Evangelical school members to the services. Perhaps tomorrow's attendance will be the largest of the 35 years, in tribute to the man who has served as Sunday school superintendent probably longer than any other Mansfielder.

Rally day at that church will be held also in honor of their boys in service and there will be a dedication of service honor roll as part of the service. A list of men of this church now serving has been printed in tomorrow's bulletin.

The recent election of the church and Sunday school resulted in the following officers: elders of the church, Jacob Schmidt and L. J. Meeker; deacons, Lyman Moore and Merle Pittenger; trustee, Paul Smith. LAVAL SURVIVES CABINET CRISIS joint appeal had been issued by Jean Bichelonne, secretary of state for production, and Hubert LaGardelle, minister of labor, calling on French workers to volunteer to work in Germany. It appeared that the Vichy regime was employing utmost pressure short of compulsion to stimulate the recruiting of labor for the Reich).

It was reported that Laval was able to avert the critical cabinet situation which threatened his position as premier by finally arriving at a compromise agreement with the Germans on the labor conscription issue.

At one point, it was said, his negotiations with the German labor commissioner, Joseph Sauckel, became so heated that Laval collapsed and was forced to leave the conference room until he had recuperated.

mothers of the band members. Students checked in at 8 a. m. to get their tags and cans and from the "Y" went to various parts of the business district.

During the first hour this morning, four band members brought in donations totaling $15. The chairman expressed the hope that sales would be much better this year than last when approximately $321 was collected.

Since the band is being called on so much more this year, cleaning bills especially, will be higher, Mrs. Young said. She said she hopes Mansfielders will remember just how often the band has given its services including the times for the "send-offs" in honor of the boys leaving for service.

Some of the students will continue their campaign until midnight and will visit theaters besides the other public places.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1942.

Now it's October, when the late coal buyers wish they had bought early.

Need for scrap metal is continuous—the war can't be won without a plentiful supply of it.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and if anyone passes you when you are traveling at 35, sound the V signal—three short and one long toot of the horn.

Donating Blood To Save Lives

LITTLE MORE than has already been said about the great need for voluntary contributions of blood seems advisable at the moment.

The Richland county Red Cross blood donor committee is carrying an earnest appeal to the people of this city and county to provide a reserve of one thousand donors, and full explanation of requirements and methods is available through committee members or by calling the Red Cross office in the Bowers building, 1494-6.

Giving one's own blood as a part of civilian participation in war reflects a willingness to sacrifice that may be considered only secondary to actual service in the armed forces of the nation—and it is in preparation to save the lives of some of the men wounded in battle that a thousand Richland county men and women, who are physically able to do so, are asked to become blood donors.

None can be unduly urged to do this—it must be left as a matter for individual decision—but the need can properly be emphasized and the suggestion offered that all interested persons investigate further.

Coffee Rationing Long Past Due

AS WAS the case with sugar, the fallacy of announcing a "shortage" in advance of making rationing effective is being demonstrated in connection with the coffee situation.

Whatever may have been the decision in the matter of Cain's question, "Am I my brother's keeper?," it has become evident that Adam's current descendents have no notion of being "their sister's keeper," in the matter of household coffee supply.

So it has come about that coffee stocks have been raided by hoarders who have bought far in excess of current needs, and standard brands have disappeared from grocers' shelves —with restricted supply made available only to regular customers in one-pound lots.

Had the intelligence been displayed in Washington that might be expected of a high school freshman class in political economy, coffee rationing would have been made effective at the time the prospective shortage was announced.

Hitler's Lost Opportunity

SUPPOSE that Adolf Hitler, when he took over Germany to rescue it from the mess that other Germans had made of it, had directed his efforts along the lines of peaceful restoration and progress. He could probably have organized and developed the Reich for industrial and commercial power instead of war power. That would have meant a return to the peaceful enterprise which prevailed before the last war under Kaiser Wilhelm, a time of expanding wealth and prestige.

Instead, and in spite of the first failure, Hitler copied the rash procedure of Wilhelm and his militarists in 1914. And the German people went along with him as they had gone along with the kaiser in an effort to win, by crime, the wealth and power they could have won by civilized means. They are now destined to suffer the same loss and disillusionment that they suffered before, only greater and more crushing.

This wicked enterprise, bringing more misery to the world than any previous disaster in human history, rolls on now to its inevitable end. It means a reversal of civilized progress, impoverishment of all mankind, and the most crushing disaster for the German race that has ever befallen a great nation. Will the Germans learn from it, or must there be still more of the savage, periodic eruptions which have cursed Europe since the times of Caesar and Tacitus?

Barred By Age, Resent Rejection

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — I've heard wartime conscription described as a hardship but it's a new one on me to discover that there are seekers for it who think they're unjustly discriminated against because the government's dilatory in mustering 'em in.

Yet a recent anonymous "Letter to the Editor" in one of Washington's newspapers bitterly makes this complaint.

The writer raises the howl that he's only just past 70 years old, as healthy as a bear and perfectly qualified to fight, but officialdom keeps stalling him off, saying his case is pending, which he's finally decided is the bunk. He's convinced that it's his age that's queering him, and he asks angrily if it's any crime on his part to be a trifle on the majority side of three score and ten.

He isn't demanding a commission, he explains, for he doesn't need a mere job, being a former mining engineer, retired on a sufficient income to keep him another decade or two. All he wants is a chance to kill some Nazis or Japs or Wops, and he contends that it's one of his rights to do so, as an American citizen.

He concludes with an expression of his opinion that there are thousands of septuagenarians in his fix.

The peculiar thing is that this case isn't unique.

At first I took it to be so, but mentioning his letter as a curiosity, in conversation with members of Gen. L. B. Hershey's Selective Service staff, I ascertained that by no means all rejectees are pleased to be turned down.

Few Write Papers.

They don't generally write to some newspaper, it's true. And maybe speaking of 'em as numbering into the thousands is an exaggregation.

What's more, there are rejections on other grounds than unqualified old age. The average individual knows how old he is, and, if he's past the deadline, accepts it as a matter of course.

If he's had some comparatively minor physical amputation or extraction, however, and takes it for granted that it didn't materially damage him, or if he's got some unsuspected disease loose in his system, I can understand that he'll be resentful at having his infirmity revealed by an army doc.

But the fact, I'd guess, is that patriotism is a more genuine article than we assess it at, casually.

Apparently there's an outright URGE to fight the enemy.

He seems to rate it as a privilege rather than as a penalty.

There probably is a modicum of foolishness about it. The old exengineer I've quoted, quite likely, would be more valuable in a civilian's job than on the firing line. There isn't any question as to his sincerity, though.

Oldsters and invalids probably would be handicaps rather than assets in combat, but there might be a few exceptions.

I knew of one instance.

Back in about the day of our own War of Secession, the South American republic of Paraguay, under President Lopez, had a conflict with Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil combined.

Lopez had a population of about 3,000,000, versus 30,000,000 approximately.

His opposition's conscription age limits were normal. His were 12 to 70.

It Took Seven Years.

He was licked but not until after seven years' fighting, at the end of which he'd been killed, among others, and, for a generation afterward, there weren't any male Paraguayans above 13 or 14 years old, or a few years more for 'em, to catch up.

What I mean to say is that I think this spells patriotism.

I suppose the Argentinos, Uruguyans and Brazilians were as patriotic as the Paraguayans were, but they weren't paying for it at the same rate.

Now, suppose, at the deadline, a Paraguayan had said, "I'm at the deadline—just past 70." Wouldn't he have made himself unpopular with his countrymen?

All right! A 70-year-old American feels the same way.

I get that chap's reaction perfectly.

He can stand it not to be conscripted, but he claims to be entitled to volunteer.

Guarding the Life and Safety of President

—By G. J. KOCHENDERFER

WHILE all newspapers conformed to the request made by the secret service department that no mention be made of President Roosevelt's cross-country trip until his return to Washington, there is now healthy editorial disagreement as to advisability or justification for the secrecy maintained during the two weeks.

The New York Herald-Tribune, for instance, hopes and urges "that not only the press but the people will say exactly what they think of this extraordinary and unprecedented withholding of news," and concludes that this "has done more to undermine the confidence of his fellow citizens than could the gravest disaster or any enemy act."

On the other hand, the thoughtful Detroit News sees that "The life of our commander-in-chief is a military objective the Axis would go far to take. That life was put in the hands of American newspapers when he asked them to refrain from all mention of the tour. . . This was news we were proud NOT to print."

Whether or not the president's life would have been more endangered by public knowledge of the tour, and day-to-day recital of his activities and itinerary, is problematical —but it was the considered judgment of secret service men and other officials that the dangers and difficulties of the long tour would have been increased by unavoidable flocking of crowds "to see the president" everywhere he went, in the event of advance announcement of his coming.

And if, as a writer in the New York Times said recently: "There isn't a story in the world good enough to justify risking the life of a single American soldier," there was surely justification for withholding news of the movements of the president of the United States, if by so doing, the hazards of the trip could be reduced even an iota.

Three American presidents have already died at the hands of assassins and attempts have been made on the life of two others—one of these being the present president.

It was on April 14, 1865, in a crowded theater where his presence was a matter of advance knowledge, that Abraham Lincoln was shot.

It was on July 2, 1881, while unguarded at a railway station in Washington, that James A. Garfield was shot.

It was on September 6, 1901, in an exposition crowd in Buffalo, that William McKinley was shot.

It was on October 14, 1912, while campaigning in Milwaukee, that former President Theodore Roosevelt was wounded by a shot fired by a crank.

It was on February 15, 1933, in advance of his first inauguration as president, that a shot was fired at Franklin D. Roosevelt in Miami, Fla., and the deflected bullet fatally wounded Mayor Cermak, of Chicago.

With this record to contemplate it would seem that captious criticism of a policy of secrecy in connection with President Roosevelt's trip is ill advised and not justified by circumstances.

Under normal conditions it is safe to assume that no such restrictions as were imposed in this instance would have been thought of, but present conditions are far from normal and reasonable wartime precautions would seem to warrant whatever "military secrecy" is deemed necessary to safeguard the life of the commander-in-chief of the nation's armed forces.

Health And Diet

Doctor Answers Health Questions.

—By DR. CLENDENING

M. L.: Is it possible to have adhesions show up in an X-ray of the right side of the abdomen?

Answer: Soft tissue, including adhesions, does not throw a shadow on the X-ray plate unless what is called contrast mediums are used. But these have not yet been applied to adhesions.

A. S.:—Is there any treatment for kidney stone besides operation?

Answer: Most kidney stones are so small they pass from the kidney to the bladder and are voided. What to do for a kidney stone depends on how much trouble it is making. If it grows to a large size and creates a pus infection of the kidney the only recourse is operation.

L. W.:—Does a diabetic have an unquenchable appetite for sweets? Are diabetics thin as a rule?

Answer: One of the primary symptoms of diabetes is hunger. Sweets satisfy it soonest, so diabetics like sweets. If diabetes continues untreated the patient becomes thin, but in the beginning overweight is the rule, in fact probably is responsible for the onset of diabetes. Go and see a doctor: you are sitting on a bomb.

T. D., Chicago, Ill.: If one suffered with chronic bronchitis and almost continuous coughs and colds for some years and then developed sinus trouble, would, in your opinion, this sinus infection be brought about as a result of the long-standing chronic bronchitis?

Answer: The chances are, in my opinion, that the bronchitis and the frequent coughs and colds were symptoms of the sinus infection. The sinus infection might easily not have been recognized as such; people who have sinus trouble do not complain in the early stage of the disease of the nose so much as they do of frequent recurrent colds.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Senate Bickered for Two Weeks During President's Secret Trip

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

BACK IN WASHINGTON after a two weeks' swing around the country for a close-up view of America's war production and military centers, President Roosevelt found what is termed an "anti-inflation law" almost in readiness for his signature.

His absence from the capital had been marked by almost continuous senate bickering over attempted stabilization of farm prices, but, after heated arguments, the senate farm bloc, following the lead of the house, squeezed through a bill which would have had the effect of recomputing parity prices — at which the president would establish ceilings on farm products —and add, according to the Office of Price Administration, approximately 3½ billion dollars to food and fiber costs.

It was a victory, but the effects were of short duration. Earlier, it developed, farm bloc-supporting senators had indicated that once their promises to Senator Thomas and his colleagues had been fulfilled, they would then support an administration proposal to amend the bill, giving the president considerable latitude in the fixing of prices.

So to the senate floor went the amendment, and by a smashing 86 to 4 vote, the legislators gave the president authority to act, before Nov. 1, to stabilize prices, wages and salaries at Sept. 15 levels "as far as practical." It was the end of a fight that had generated many a sharp word in the legislative chamber.

Final version of the bill was passed by the house late Friday, 257-22, and President Roosevelt signed it a few hours later.

At Home

Out of the Shadow.

Like most men when their time seems to be running quickly out, AP War Correspondent Vern Haugland turned to his God and prayed. In the wildest jungle of New Guinea his prayers were answered with a nick-of-time miracle.

Haugland, 34, a native of Minnesota and inexperienced in jungle ways, was given up for lost when the bomber in which he was flying from Australia to cover the New Guinea warfare ran out of gas Aug. 7 and crashed. While he lay semi-conscious but recovering in a Port Moresby hospital, the diary he kept for at least 32 of the 43 maddening days he was lost, told the terrible story of his fight for life.

With Co-pilot Lieut. James A. Michael of Temple, Okla., Haugland had parachuted into New Guinea's jungle. The men hiked along rivers, finally separated.

"If I don't die tonight, I may push on along shore tomorrow," Haugland wrote after 23 days of wandering. "Pray to God for safety," he wrote before trying to cross a river and scale sheer mountains.

On Sept. 9 when he was dragging himself along a path toward a native village, the already contused and delirious entries stopped. Ten days later missionaries found him.

Freeze Coming.

America's growing list of "frozen" articles—automobiles, bicycles, stoves, to name a few—expanded during the week to make room for a newcomer, the rubber boot.

The War Production Board announced the action after a mounting demand for rubber boots and rubber work shoes. Ordinary overshoes, arctics, women's and children's boots using a large amount of reclaimed rubber were not affected.

Passenger train schedules were also "frozen," effective yesterday, and special trains for sports events were forbidden.

Slow Gain.

The Maritime Commission's report to President Roosevelt showed that the country's shipyards are producing three ships a day and an average of 1,000,000 tons a month. In the past 12 months, yards have produced 488 ships—but the enemy has sunk 475 United Nations merchantmen in the western Atlantic alone since Pearl Harbor.

Abroad

Stalingrad Fights On.

Stalingrad passed its fifth week of siege, a city virtually blasted from its foundations but still lashing at the invaders. From the center of the 1,200-mile battle front came shock-troops in command of famed Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, and Russian counter-attacks flared all around the flame-ringed city.

But Adolf Hitler grew impatient, was reported by Vichy radio to have dismissed Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock at Stalingrad, replaced him with ruthless, 62-year-old Field Marshal Siegmund List, a leading exponent of lightning war.

If Stalingrad could be won with men's lives, Hitler still was willing to pay.

Death at Dieppe.

As if to tell the United Nations what they must expect in a full-dress invasion of the continent, Churchill went before commons again to relate the story of Dieppe. But this time it was a sombre story, and he explained that, on Sept. 8, when he reported most of the Dieppe force returned, "I was referring to the assaulting force as a whole."

British Churchill tanks, mounting six-pound guns, ran into "altogether unexpected strength" in the defense blocks in Dieppe's streets.

Another Shangri La?

Like well-oiled automatons guided by a master brain, Hungary, Rumania, and Bulgaria followed Germany months ago into the war against the United States. It looked like a safe play, permitting these junior Axis members to function as belligerents without assuming major risks.

At mid-summer, the U. S. declared war on the triumvirate, but this action, too, appeared to be mostly for keeping the records straight.

Last week the blow fell. Far-ranging, high altitude American Consolidated B-24 bombers, packing as much as 9,000 pounds of destruction in their bellies, were disclosed to have blasted the Balkans, spreading terror in Budapest, Zagreb and Bucharest.

U. S. army authorities abroad and in Washington kept mum on the subject. There was no proof that the bombers were manned by American crews, yet American fliers are based within range of the targets. Where the planes came from was another guarded secret.

Boastful Adolf.

Hitler was in fine voice. For an hour and seven minutes, at Berlin's Sportspalast, he boasted of the superiority of German arms and armies, the vastness of German conquests; he poured sarcasm on England, the United States and Winston Churchill.

But Adolf was not to be caught out on a limb again. Where, a year ago, he assured Germany that Russia had been crushed, this time he promised to take Stalingrad and added "nobody on earth could succeed in driving the Germans back from it."

Surprise visitor among Adolf's 10,000-soldier audience: Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, thought by everyone to be still in command of Germany's Afrika Korps.

Connivers Fall Out.

Scheming, ferret-faced Pierre Laval never has made a secret of his allegiance to Adolf Hitler; when Berlin yanks the strings, Laval dances to the macabre music that means enslavement or death for his countrymen.

So, when Vichy Secretary of State Jacques Benoist-Mechin was dismissed from Premier Laval's cabinet a week ago, it should have been because Benoist-Mechin didn't want to move fast enough on the road to collaboration. The trouble actually was, he wanted to move too fast.

Laval dumped Benoist-Mechin with the mere comment: "I shall under no circumstances allow the authority of the government to be attacked."

Master Race.

More evidence piled up during the week to indicate that while the Nazis' hold on occupied countries may not be seriously threatened, they are having no picnic:

In Alsace, German authorities had to lock the doors of a movie house to compel the Alsatians to remain for an "educational" Nazi news reel.

In a little village near Holland's Zuyder Zee, Germans arrested the burgomaster, forced him to furnish the names of three hostages who would be held responsible for the correct behavior of the populace. The burgomaster complied, was released—and rearrested when the hostages were discovered to be two village idiots and the local Nazi leader.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — Sixth avenue, which for years came close to approximating the steaming ghettos of the lower east side, is today a veritable ghost street—knocked cockeyed, spraddle-legged and lonely (empty would be a better word) by the war.

I suppose it's the war. For Sixth avenue used to be a rendezvous of employment agencies, little upstairs rooms where an endless stream of human beings entered and went away, sometimes with a job, sometimes without.

Those lines of people aren't there today. They're in factories or in the armed services. You can still see the signs out front. . . . "Cook wanted—$20 . . . "Handy Man, Sleep on Premises" . . . Signs like that. Hundreds of little jobs offered every day. . . .

SOMETIMES the people dominated the pavements for a block. . . . If you were in a hurry, it was best to walk in the street . . . the crowds spilled over into the shooting galleries, where the flea circuses carried on with their never-failing audience of gapers, and the short order restaurants, where you can get a meal of beans and sausage and bread for fifteen cents.

You can walk from 59th street to 42d street and find less than a third of the people on 6th that were there, say, six months ago. They aren't in the secondhand book stores, or the little cinema, which shows pictures that are ten years old. They aren't in Bryant park or Central park. It's just one more thumb print of the war on the town.

IT TAKES all kinds, a friend of mine discovered all over again the other day.

He was persuaded to make a talk in the public library at a nearby town, one of those public interviews. And the mistress of ceremonies announced at the outset that questions from the audience would be answered in due course.

A short, elderly gentleman got to his feet. "Have you read the Bible?" he demanded abruptly.

"Some," my friend admitted.

The mistress of ceremonies tried to sush the gentleman, but there was no sushing.

"Do you know it's full of mistakes?" said the man.

"Well—" my friend temporized, mildly nonplussed.

"Do you know where the first mistake is?" demanded the inquisitor, and my friend said "No."

The light of discovery came into the gentleman's eyes. "It's in the very first verse," he said eagerly. "There ought to be a comma after God."

And before my friend could speak, he rushed in again: "But it's going to be corrected in the next edition," he said, and sat down, abruptly.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

HOME REPAIRS BY SUBSTITUTE MATERIAL NOW

Wood Gutters Finding Favor; Plastics Are Popular For War-Time Building.

The shortage of critical materials is focusing attention on the development of substitutes to be used in home building.

Already there have been developed a number of capable substitutes, and others are in various stages of test and development. Many of the new homes being built to supply the housing needs of war industry workers are fabricated from recently developed materials.

While not an innovation, wood gutters are being used more and more. Many manufacturers are making gutters which possess the strength and rigidity necessary to withstand all types of severe weather. The development of wooden gutters has released tons of metal to direct war production.

A more recent development that can be traced to a direct effort to conserve vital metals, is the substitute for the once standard plumbing equipment.

Today we find plumbing fixtures made of vitreous clay, shower heads of porcelain, kitchen sinks of stone, shower cabinets made of plastic wood or concrete, grease traps developed from ceramics. The list is long, but these are just a few of the more typical examples.

A new heating duct made of asbestos has many advantages over ducts made of steel. The asbestos duct, which was developed to save precious metal, combines the feature of insulation with an effective hushing of noises made by fans and equipment, and also eliminates the "cracking" sound caused by changes in air pressure or expansion strains.

Plastics are playing a big part in the development of building materials designed to save in the use of metals. A line of bathroom fixtures molded of lucite has recently been introduced, saving much brass that was formerly used.

Plastic weather stripping is also proving effective in replacing the metal strips formerly used for insulation. Plastics are also being used for "sticking" shingles together, saving nails.

These are just a few examples of recent developments in building materials. It is through developments and experiments such as these that the building industry has been enabled to continue with its vital and prodigious job of supplying homes for war workers, and at the same time keep the use of critical materials at the minimum.

These substitute materials are good, in some instances better than the materials they have replaced.

Smart's "A Real Music Store" With Full Instrument Display

In the accompanying photographs are shown, top, music shop and studios of Eugene Smart's "Real Music Store" at 5 Park avenue west; lower left Haddorf and the pupular musette.

To satisfy every taste, the record department probably is the most extensive in this section of Ohio. Evening hours provide added opportunity for the music lover to inspect Smart's offerings. A complete drum department also is maintained in this section.

In the training phase, Smart has built the foundation from which many have gone on to success in the professional musical circles. Truly, Smart's is "A Real Music Store."

Pioneer Firm Maintains Complete Training, Sales Lines.

Developing through 25 years of proven sales and training methods the slogan "A Real Music Store," Mansfield can boast one of north-central Ohio's outstanding businesses in Smart's Music Shop and Studios at 5 Park avenue west and Smart's piano and record store at 6 South Main street.

During the quarter century Smart's has become a familiar name in Mansfield musical circles, not only furnishing instruments—singly or in volume—but supplying entertainers for church, club and civic programs and in training musicians who have or are carving their names in the music amusement field.

"Happiness through proper execution" is a keynote in the Smart method of training instumentalists. Among the many who gained their training under Eugene Smart are Dale Stevens, Ralph Arlin, George Gazdak, Harold Duda, Richard Sowash, Bruce Graves, "Bill" Smith and Fred Lavender—all with their own name bands or affiliated with collegiate or traveling organizations.

Sound-proof studios are maintained in conjunction with the music shop at 5 Park avenue west. Here can be found fulfillment of every wish for popular sheet music, standard classics and methods.

In addition, a complete repair department is maintained as a function of the music shop which features a complete line of small instruments for band or orchestra. Among the makers represented in the lines are Conn, Olds, Selmer, Martin, Gibson—all internationally recognized trade names.

Here too is found the Magnavox radio and phonograph display. The Magnavox has been awarded the Navy "E" pennant for excellence and is easily the oldest name in radio manufacture. Many of today's radio and phonograph benefits were first found in Magnavox creations.

Eugene Smart is definitely interested in the proper development of music in the home and every effort is made to afford the proper medium of creating the grace and beauty which comes from correctly attained melody regardless of the type of origin.

In the South Main street store, connecting with ease to the music shop and studios the Smart display of pianos includes the products of master craftsmen such as Kimball, Hallett and Davis, Estey,

REVIEW OF KOMROFF'S NOVEL IS IMPRESSIVE

Mrs. W. E. Benninghoff Tells About New Book, "In the Years of Our Lord," Story of the Life of Jesus.

WHAT has been justly called "the most beautiful story in the world," the story of the life of Jesus, is presented in Manuel Komroff's new novel, "In the Years of Our Lord," which was reviewed at the First Presbyterian church Friday afternoon by Mrs. W. E. Benninghoff of Cleveland. Yesterday's program was the first in a series of three to be given by Mrs. Benninghoff under the auspices of the Women's Association of the First Congregational church.

In a charming manner which has made her popular with Mansfield audiences, Mrs. Benninghoff told how Komroff's book is a reverent version of the events and personalities which colored the 33 years that spanned the birth, life and death of Jesus Christ. She explained that "In the Years of Our Lord" is called a novel because, in addition to incidents which are the fruit of Mr. Komroff's wide studies in Jewish secular and religious history, there are portions of the book which are of the author's own, harmonious invention.

Mrs. Benninghoff's dramatic talent impressed upon her audience the character studies that Mr. Komroff presents to his readers. The book tells in an interesting manner of the miracles performed by Jesus and of the people who lived in Jerusalem when He did. Pontius Pilate is an outstanding character and is portrayed in more than one of the author's "imaginative" scenes. Thus, the large number of women who heard Mrs. Benninghoff's review, gathered that Mr. Komroff's expert merging of true incidents, drawn from the gospels, with his own version of some of the Biblical stories, makes "In the Years of Our Lord" a book that should not be passed over.

Critics agree in their high praises of the novel which is based on "the most difficult story in the world to write." The audience Friday learned from Mrs. Benninghoff's review that, as John Cournos, writer for the New York Times book review says, Mr. Komroff's story is a success because he has eliminated all shadow of doubt as to Jesus' divinity. . . . He does not allow the spell of divinity to be broken. . . . Not once does he permit the essential humanity of Jesus to condescend to the human-all-too-human." Mr. Cournos commends Komroff's adroit maintenance of this balance: "to the rendering unto Jesus the things that are Jesus' and unto humanity the things that are humanity's." The book, therefore, is called an excellent version of "the most beautiful story in the world."

The next review by Mrs. Benninghoff will be given on Nov. 6.

Meeting Held by D. A. R. Chapter At Courtney Home

Forty-three members of Jared Mansfield Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, were entertained at a dessert-luncheon Friday at the home of Mrs. A. E. Courtney, 140 Sherman avenue. Associate hostesses were Mrs. J. M. Barnett, Mrs. H. E. McClure, Mrs. J. H. Bristor, Mrs. Charles Allen, Mrs. E. F. Mast, Mrs. Benjamin Sutter, Miss Mollie Rhodes and Miss Jeannette Martin.

Miss Cloude Blake, national defense chairman, assisted by Mrs. A. C. Tuttle, presented the program of her committee as outlined by the state chairman. Money gifts to the blood plasma program, purchase of war bonds and stamps and volunteer war work were particularly emphasized as important for all members to take part in. Miss Blake asked Miss Dora McLeod to be responsible for subscriptions to the National Defense News.

During the business session, conducted by the regent, Mrs. B. H. Spear, reports were given on the recent Northwest district conference held at Norwalk. The chapter voted $10 toward two scholarships for children in southern mountain schools and a donation for rewarping the looms at Ellis Island. It was reported that two boxes of clothing were sent to Crossnore school in North Carolina.

Mrs. A. E. Kell was welcomed as a new member and the chapter present a farewell gift to Miss Elizabeth Ackerman, who will leave soon for training as a WAVE. The next meeting will be a dessert luncheon at 1:30 p. m. Nov. 6, at the home of Mrs. LeRoy Wittemire, 109 Columbia avenue.

LICENSES GAIN

MILLERSBURG — Marriage licenses in Holmes county seem to be gaining in number since hitting the low total of three in July. Five were issued in August and seven in September. In Sept. 1941 six were issued.

Those present from out of town were Mrs. Carleton Mitchell of Washington, D. C., David Miller of Evanston, Ill., and Lieut. and Mrs. Edwin Jelliff of San Antonio, Tex.

Mansfield Garden Club Ends Year

The "surprise" place for the final meeting of the Mansfield Garden club on Friday was the cabin on the farm of Dr. and Mrs. John S. Hattery. An interesting talk on "Friends of the Land," a conservaton society, was given by Mrs. J. C. Gurman. Mrs. Hattery told the club about the planting of six thousand small fir trees on the farm in 1927, and the group observed that they are large, lovely trees today. She also mentioned several other interesting facts about the farm.

When officers for the coming year were elected, the members chose the same who had served during the past season with the exception of the secretary's office, which is to be filled by Mrs. T. J. Newcomb. Mrs. Ephraim Brown is president; Mrs. Wallace Campbell, vice president, and Mrs. Alan Tappan, treasurer.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

NINE IS NOT ELEVEN

Very few hands are played in minor suit contracts by the leaders of bridge. Game contracts in minor suits are less numerous still, in comparison with major and No Trump games. That is, when they have to be played from scratch. A partial score, already recorded on the sheet, obviously changes a good deal of that. But to bid for 11 tricks, as is necessary to make a minor game from zero, is a terrific job as compared to bidding and making ten at a safe major or nine at a sound No Trump. Even many a No Trump game is essayed and scored by top-liners with some one suit completely unstopped—either because it is not led or because it is only a four-carder.

At both tables of a team of four match, West felt he was committed by his opening dealer bid to show a rebid when his partner responded with a suit, and neither could find anything better for the purpose than an unsatisfactory raise with only three diamonds. East at the first table decided the diamonds must be so near to solid that he could take a chance on the club suit, which he did with his No Trump bid. The spade 4 was led to the A and ten tricks were run pronto, for an extra trick.

Where East hopped to 5-Diamonds, he didn't have a ghost of a show, as the defenders raked in the first three tricks in clubs.

Notice that, at the first table, even a club could have done no harm, as only four tricks could have been taken in the suit, after which the declarer would have had one more trick-taker than there were tricks remaining to be taken.

THEATERS

Musical Fest.

Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire sing and dance the tunes of Irving Berlin in their new production, "Holiday Inn," at the Ohio. Astaire has two partners, Marjorie Reynolds and Virginia Dale, both of whom he claims are "Easy to Dance With," in the number bearing that title. The picture has its setting in a Connecticut farmhouse turned by Crosby into an inn only on holidays and it introduces some elaborate production numbers headed by the aforementiined entertainers. Walter Abel is in the cast.

Official War Film.

Mickey Rooney's new picture, "A Yank at Eton," shares the bill at the Madison with "The World At War," a full-length feature and the first of its kind presented by the United States government. The latter is based on never-before-seen newsreels skillfully woven into a hard-hitting story that traces facist and Nazi aggression to Pearl Harbor. The horrors the Nazi blitz are pictured in the fall of Warsaw, Rotterdam and Brussels. Mickey's comedy has to do with a typical American, Rooney film type, at Eton and contains a series of hilarious situations in which Tina Thayer and Edmund Gwenn appear.

Absorbing Drama.

Individual drama and the struggle to smash the Axis are blended in "Wings For The Eagle," the wartime romance showing at the Ritz. Featuring Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson the picture deals with the men and women who turn out America's planes. Most of the action takes place at the Lockhead Aircraft Plant where the trio of stars are fellow workers. Miss Sheridan plays Carson's wife and Morgan has the role of a chap who wants to befriend her. George Tobias is also cast. H. G. Wells' picture, "Mr. Kipps," is the co-feature.

Rollicking Comedy.

The enthusiasm of a young wife for good causes brings her husband so much embarrassment that he finally skips town in "Twin Beds," the farce comedy based on the popular Broadway hit of 1916, opening Sunday at the Park. Featuring Joan Bennett, George Brent, Mischa Auer and Una Merkel the picture is set in four glittering New York apartments, one of them modern with Victorian furniture. Anna May Wong is featured in the second picture, "Bombs Over Burma," dealing with the efforts of a Chinese school teacher to track down a Jap spy.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"So sorry, Mees Carolyn," Dicky said mockingly, "but I am afraid you will have to endure my touch and that of Miss Whitlock while we escort you down the stairs and into the car.

"You see," he went on, "I used to be a wild animal trainer, and learned you must never let a young tiger cat get out of your reach until it's thoroughly tamed. So Miss Whitlock and I are going to grip your elbows tight until we board the car."

"I wish I were a tigress," Carolyn said, her teeth clicking venomously. "I'd—I'd—"

"Claw my map until even my dearly beloved spouse would have trouble recognizing me," Dicky finished, as her choking voice failed her. "So sorry that I cannot give you that pleasure just now. Some other time, perhaps. How about it, Miss Whitlock? Are we ready to start?"

Start For Hideaway.

"All ready," she said, seeing that Carolyn had put on her hat and coat.

"I will take your bag and Carolyn's," I volunteered, "as they are both light."

The nurse then took Carolyn's left arm in a firm grip and Dicky the other. I brought up the rear, and we went down the stairs to my father waiting inside the door.

"Just a minute," my father said. "There's a car passing now. The guard will tell us when the street is clear."

Soon the guard put his head inside and said "All clear," and my father went quickly down the steps, with an imperative "Hurry!" We obeyed, and when the driver started the car, there was no indication that anyone had witnessed our departure.

Carolyn Blindfolded.

"Follow your usual course," my father told the driver, and the man expertly "angled" the streets with the lights until he reached a quiet deserted street, where he slowed down, patently upon previous instructions from the "Chief."

"Please draw the curtains in the back, Richard," my father said. Dicky promptly obeyed, completely screening Carolyn, sitting in the rear seat from outside view.

"Now, Miss Whitlock, please blindfold the girl securely."

Carolyn flinched and her lips whitened, but she did not cry out. Whether she stood in awe of my father, or finally had accepted the inevitable, I did not know, but she submitted quietly to the blindfolding, then sank back, her fists tightly clenched in her lap.

"We'll keep the curtains down, my father said, then added a terse direction to the driver. "And drive inside the garage when we get there," he added.

Safe at Destination.

"Okay!" the driver answered, and no one spoke again until the car rolled into the big Chinese factory, whose proprietor was one of my father's most trusted men.

The big doors of the "garage" closed behind us, then a steel partition—seemingly an immovable wall with a small door at one side of it—rose into the air and the car rolled through into a big back room. Then the steel curtain quietly slid back into place.

"We will get out here," my father said. "And Miss Whitlock, I am sure I need not ask you to forget anything you may see or hear from now on."

"I shall be deaf, dumb, and blind," the nurse assured him.

Then my father led us to a narrow door, which he unlocked, and locked after us when we had passed through it.

"You may take off the blindfold now," he said, nodding to Miss Whitlock.

Tygers Lose Second Straight Game at Sandusky 28-6

Sport Podge by REX HESS

One of Mansfield's undefeated Tygers of last fall crashes the Ivy league today.

Making the trip with Miami's Redskins to Hanover, New Hampshire, for purposes of doing battle with Dartmouth's Indians, is Bill Pecht, star tackle of the 1941 Tyger eleven.

Pecht not only has made the first squad at Oxford in his freshman year, he played nearly an entire half of last Saturday's game against Centre college.

No, the Redskins don't expect to scalp the Indians, but they hope to do their share in making war-whoopie.

Ken Smith, star guard of last year's Tyger machine, also is at Miami, but hasn't gone out for football, so I am informed.

And the reason you see Fullback Adam Brandt on the sidelines at the Tyger games this fall is: Adam decided, after attending two classes, that Miami wasn't for him, and came home.

Miami's classic halls he's spurning,
He didn't crave that higher learning.

Mansfielder Stan Partenheimer is the hero of the day among followers of the Oneonta (N. Y.) Indians in the Canadian-American loop.

Partenheimer, who had a successful season last year hurling for Canton in the Mid-Atlantic league, pitched the deciding victory for Oneonta in the final playoff series with the season-champion Amsterdam club.

Oneonta, finishing fourth in the regular schedule, won four out of five games from Utica in the prelimiary playoff, then took Amsterdam four out of seven in the finals.

Partenheimer dropped one series game 9-0 when Oneonta got only two hits off Haag of Amsterdam.

But when the chips were down in the seventh and deciding game, the Mansfielder allowed only five hits, and turned in a 4-0 shutout.

Said the Sporting News: Excellent pitching by Tom Fine and Stan Partenheimer carried the Indians through both series.

Rams Ramble Over Orrville 26-0

Hammer Gets Four Tallies

Anthony, Wynn, Bader Sparkle on Offense.

SCRAPPING a heavier, more experienced band of Orrville Red Riders to a standstill, Madison high school's green-clad Rams ran wild before a crowd of nearly 5,000 jubilant fans last night to chalk up a 26-0 victory over their hitherto undefeated opponents.

It was the second straight victory for Coach Al Fendrick's battling Rams, and one of their most convincing in recent years.

Little Harold Hammer, 125-pound quarterback and captain of the Rams, scored all four touchdowns, sneaking for the first three inside the two-yard line, and blasting off tackle from the five for the fourth.

* * *

And he tossed completed passes for extra points after the first two touchdowns in the opening quarter.

While Hammer was doing the scoring, too much credit can not be given fleet-footed Bob Anthony, and scrappy Billy Wynn and Bader for their part in moving the oval into scoring position.

Biggest thrill of the night was Anthony's 70-yard run from his own 28-yard mark to the Orrville two where he was finally forced out of bounds. The run was made from deep punt formation, giving Anthony plenty of room to get up steam before he reached the line of scrimmage, and he was really flying when he went past the Rider forward wall.

Madison got a break right off the bat when Spriesterback's kickoff twisted off his toe and fell short, to be recovered by the Rams. The Rams tore through for one first down, but then took a 15-yard penalty. Anthony picked up another first on a 20-yard run, and went around end eight yards to the 12 where a fumble lost nine. Anthony missed a first by a yard, and Orrville punted out. Anthony returned 25 yards to the Rider 18. Wynn picked up seven on a spinner, and Hammer went 10 for a first on the one, where Hammer sneaked over. Hammer passed to Gross for the enxtra point.

With Joe Yonto and Jacobs reeling off yardage, Orrville looked dangerous after the next kickoff, but stalled in midfield and punted to Anthony who returned to the 28. On the next play Anthony got away on his 70-yard run, and Hammer took it over from the two for a touchdown. Hammer passed to Poston for the point.

Anthony was knocked out, and was forced out of the game until midway in the third period, and Madison's offense suffered through the second quarter.

Orrville opened up with passes in its own territory early in the third period, and Gross intercepted a pass by Yonto on the Rider 33. On the next play Hammer took a lateral from Bader, and twisted loose for a 32-yard run to the one-yard line where he went out of bounds. Hammer sneaked over again for the touchdown. A sneak for point by Wynn failed to get the extra point by inches.

Madison marched 73 yards for the final touchdown in the fourth period. Wynn picked up eight yards in two trips and Anthony made a first down. Bader got six yards and Anthony five for another first. Wynn plunged for nine, and Bader slipped off tackle for 17 and a first on the 29. Wynn got four yards, and Anthony went for 10 on a reverse, and a first on the seven. Hammer picked up two yards, and then went five for a touchdown on a burst off tackle. And an entire substitute lineup took the field for Madison with three and a half minutes left to play. They failed to make the extra point.

Orrville tried desperately to score against the subs, but missed connections when Yonto fumbled on the 15 after a 15-yard run with Madison recovering, and again on the final play of the game when Norman was tackled 15 yards away from the goal after taking a 10-yard pass from Yonto.

The Riders nearly scored when Norman got away for a long run on a pass from Yonto, only to go out of bounds on the 30.

First downs: Madison 11; Orrville 7; net yards forwards, Madison 11; Orrville 40; forwards attempted, Madison 3; Orrville 11; forwards completed, Madison 3; Orrville 4; intercepted by Madison 2; penalties, Madison 4; Orrville 2; yards lost penalties, Madison 30; Orrville 30.

Hammer Rambles In Ram Grid Victory

Yankees, Cards Resume Series

National Leaguers Brim With Confidence.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Cardinals and the Yankees, locked up in a world series that looked tighter every minute, were agreed upon at least one point as they came to grips again at Yankee stadium today in third game of the autumn classic.

They concurred in the belief that it might be a bright idea for one of them to win the next three games in fast succession and obviate the necessity of trying to get back to St. Louis, possibly by mule train, some time next week. They only differed sharply as to which of them should have the honor.

Each had won one tussle, the Yanks taking the opener 7-4 and the Cards coming back behind their freshman phenom, Johnny Beazley, to win the second bout in St. Louis, 4-3. A sweep of the three games at the stadium, starting today, would give either of them the championship.

It was surprising what a taste of raw meat had done to all the National leaguers. They really thought they had the Yankees on the run as the result of the manner in which they won the second contest—with sharp base-running, fine fielding and timely hitting.

"I was always confident we would beat the Yankees," said the Cardinals' manager, Billy Southworth, "and I'm more sure of it than ever now. Slaughter and Musial started hitting in the second game, and I think they'll keep it up."

Even Ernie White, the slight, blond southpaw who was scheduled to pitch against the vaunted Yank sluggers today, exuded a quiet confidence.

Athletic Use of Buses Banned

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—State education officials said today that the long-debated question whether school buses may be used for athletic events and other extra-curricular projects has been settled.

Such service, they say, "is definitely out" under orders just received from the Office of Defense Transportation.

The ODT order restricts service by chartered school buses to service between home and school for students, teachers and school employes.

Galion Breaks 4-Year Drouth

Finally Scores Win In N.C.O. Grid Loop.

Coach Jimmy Lymper's Galion high schol Orangemen today boasted their first victory in four years in the North Central Ohio league, an 8-0 decision scored last night over Shelby's Whippets.

Bill Stoner scored the touchdown on a cutback in the first period, and Captain Ramsey tackled Stark back of the goal line for a safety in the second quarter. Numerous penalties kept the Orangemen from further scoring as Galion chalked up 13 first downs to two for Shelby, and gained 250 yards to the Whippets' 65.

Other N. C. O. games followed the dope sheet as Ashland rolled over the crippled Bucyrus Redmen 20-0, and Marion scored a 20-7 win over Mt. Vernon.

Biggest upset of the day among Mansfield's opponents was the scoreless tie to which Canton McKinley was held by Canton Lincoln. It was the first meeting between the two schools, and the first time McKinley has even been threatened with defeat by a rival Canton team.

Massillon Tigers stretched their undefeated streak through 46 games, running wild over a strong Lincoln, Neb., eleven in an intersectional tilt 40-6.

Lincoln scored in the first quarter, but Massillon came roaring back with three touchdowns in the second to lead 20-6 at the half. A 66-yard march was climaxed by a 21-yard touchdown run by Bob Grabler in the third period, and the Tiger second string backfield marked up two more touchdowns in the fourth.

Willard got into the victory column yesterday with a 13-0 win over Carey.

Loudonville's Red Birds invaded Bellville for a 47 to 12 victory over the Richland countians.

TOURNEY SUSPENDED

AUGUSTA, Ga.—(INS)—Wartime conditions today were blamed for closing of the Augusta National Golf club and suspension of the popular Masters' tournament founded by Bobby Jones.

Indiana Draws Favorite Role

Brown Expects Toughest Kind of Football Game.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — The experts had Indiana's Hoosiers wearing the "favorite" tag today as Coach Alvin (Bo) McMillin's proteges set themselves for the Big Ten's opening clash with Ohio State before some 40,000 customers, including about 8,000 high school guests.

William (Billy the Kid) Hillenbrand, sensational junior halfback who was a prime factor in 14 of the Hoosiers' 15 touchdowns last year, was the big reason the Indians were favored over the Ohios.

McMillin, who only a few days ago boasted he had "the greatest bunch of boys I ever coached," and that he wouldn't trade his first 10 backfielders for any 10 he ever saw, was a bit worried today, however.

The "Praying Colonel" of Centre college fame—now the "Graying Colonel" of the Hoosiers—had a bad night. Among the reasons, in addition to worrying about the Bucks, were:

1—The train beating the Hoosiers here was 40 minutes late.

2—Dinner, ordered ahead of time, was almost cold at the hotel when the team arrived.

3—McMillin was late for a speaking engagement before Indiana alumni at a local club.

4—Capt. Bob White of the Hoosiers became ill with an arm infection en route, and was taken to a hospital for a three-day stay, definitely putting the Joliet, Ill., fullback out of the fray.

Coach Paul E. Brown of the Bucks said he expected the toughest sort of game, and admitted he'd be glad to settle for a one-point victory — "provided we can get the point."

No one on the Buck team was expected to match Hillenbrand in all-around brilliance, or halfback Bob Cowan, the Hoosier State's sprint champion, in sheer speed. However, the Buck backs appear capable of a good performance in all departments, and in overall speed Ohio probably has just a bit of edge over the invaders.

The chances are that the owl is doing a grand job of exterminating mice and other destructive small animals, and that it's predations on song or game birds are non-existent, or relatively small. Individually, an owl such as the great horned owl may be an outlaw, but, in general owls are useful birds.

The Texas Game Department sends a tip to pluck a duck with ease. Don't try to pick off all the little feathers. Just pull out the larger, coarser ones, and then pour melted paraffin all over the bird. Then dip into cold water. You can then pick of the paraffin, feathers, down, and all in big flakes. When that's finished, dry the bird, singe it, and your duck is ready for the oven.

Streaks Make Use of Strength In Line

Mansfield Shows Fight In First Period March To Touchdown

IT WAS A SAD STORY Mansfield high school's Tygers brought back from Sandusky last night, a story of a 28-6 defeat at the hands of their old rivals, the Blue Streaks, and the second straight loss for the Tygers.

Even as pre-game dope indicated, Sandusky made full use of its superior strength in the line, strength based on both experience and an 18-pound per man weight advantage, and stuck to straight football to score in every period.

For one quarter Mansfield was in the ball game, fighting back after the first Sandusky score to stage a march which resulted in a Tyger touchdown on the first play of the second period.

* * *

Sandusky drove to a touchdown from the first kickoff which Freitas returned to the 32-yard line. A five-yard penalty on Mansfield helped the Streaks to a first down on the 44. Marshall broke loose for a first down on the Mansfield 44, and spinners by Freitas and Marshall moved the ball down to the 26. Wilk took the ball to the 11, and Marshall, on a spinner, was brought down just short of the goal line where it was first down. The fighting Tygers tossed Marshall for a two-yard loss, but on the next play, another spinner, Marshall broke through the line and scored standing up. Silvani, a goal-kicking sub, booted the extra point.

It was Mansfield's turn to march as Zivkoff returned the next kickoff to the 36, a 25-yard run. Tygers failed to make the necessary yardage, but Sandusky was penalized 15 yards for roughing the kicker and it was Mansfield's ball on the Sandusky 45. Boyce and Zivkoff carried the ball to the Streak 32 for a first down. Passes from Schmidt to Lewis and Burrage made it first on the 19, and Schmidt on an end run carried the ball to the 13 where Mansfield was penalized five yards.

Schmidt got away for eight yards to the 10 where Mansfield again was penalized five yards. A pass from Schmidt to Boyce made it first down on the three, and on the first play of the second quarter Boyce blasted over for a touchdown. Lewis' kick for point failed.

Mansfield threatened again shortly afterward when Schmidt recovered a Sandusky fumble on the Mansfield 36, and Schmidt and Boyce carried to the 43, where a Sandusky penalty of five yards made it first down on the 48, but the threat ended in midfield.

Sandusky got a break when it recovered a Tyger fumble on the Mansfield 35, and the Streaks moved to a touchdown from there, scoring on a 21-yard pass from Freitas to Cooper. It was the real turning point of the game. Sylvani again came in to boot the point.

Desperate, the Tygers opened up with passes in their own territory, and Sandusky intercepted on the Mansfield 31. But this time the Tygers held and took the ball on downs on the 11 as the half ended.

An intercepted pass midway in the third period led to the Streaks' next score. Sandusky took the ball on the Mansfield 46, and moved up to the 22 where Freitas passed to Greene for a touchdown, and again Sylvania booted the point.

Early in the fourth quarter Mansfield carried the ball down to the Sandusky 30, only to lose it on downs.

And once more an intercepted pass led to a Sandusky touchdown, the Streaks taking over on the Tyger 30. A five-yard penalty helped the Streaks to the nine-yard line, where Ernst bucked to the three and Freitas drove over for the score. Sylvani got the extra point.

Another interception on the Mansfield 20 almost proved costly as Ernst flashed over the goal line only to be called back as Sandusky was penalized 15 yards for clipping.

DAVIS, Cal. —(U.P.)— Courses in tomato picking have now been established by the University of California Agricultural college in tomato-growing districts.

The courses are destined to make tomato pickers familiar with state canning inspection grades and to save tires, since loads will not be rejected and returned for sorting when tomatoes are properly picked.

Italy and Germany rank first and second as countries of birth of foreign-born U. S. residents.

STEEL ISSUES PACE RISING STOCK MARKET

Senate Completion of Tax Bill, Better War News Improve Trading.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Steels continued in front of a rising stock market today as fractional advances were well distributed in virtually all departments.

Improved at an active opening were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Jones & Laughlin, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Chrysler, Standard Oil (NJ), Atlantic Refining and J. I. Case.

Further buying was attributed partly to somewhat better war news and the senate finance committee's completion of the tax bill.

Market analysts found a constructive clue in the federal reserve order cutting deposit reserve requirements of New York and Chicago banks to 20 per cent as a means of increasing the supply of investment funds in these cities.

Helpful was the announcement that eastern aircraft manufacturers had agreed to pool their combined resources of engineering research, patents, facilities, materials and personnel in an all-out effort to attain maximum production.

BYRNES NAMED ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM HEAD

President Gives Justice Full Authority to Direct Economy Program.

cessfully to have incorporated in the present tax bill before congress.

The president provided for stabilization of all agricultural prices, including commodities manufactured or processed in substantial part from agricultural commodities, at Sept. 15 levels "so far as practicable . . . and in compliance" with the legislation he signed last night.

Subject to policies determined by Byrnes, Mr. Roosevelt provided for agricultural prices to be established or maintained or adjusted jointly by Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard and Henderson.

"Any disagreement between them shall be resolved by the director," the order said.

This was the basic provision of the president's wage and salary stabilization policy:

"No increases in wage rates, granted as a result of voluntary agreement, collective bargaining, conciliation, arbitration, or otherwise, and no decreases in wage rates, shall be authorized unless notice of such increases or decreases shall have been filed with the national war labor board, and unless the national war labor board has approved such increases or decreases."

Then the president told the NWLB in his executive order not to approve any increase in wage rates prevailing on Sept. 15 "unless such increase is necessary to correct maladjustments or inequalities, to eliminate substandards of living to correct gross inequities, or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war."

The NWLB, the order provided, shall not approve any wage reductions below highest wages paid for particular work between Jan. 1 and Sept. 15 this year.

However, it was authorized to make exemptions from the provisions of Mr. Roosevelt's order on wages "in the case of small total wage increases or decreases as it deems necessary. . . ."

The president's ban on boosting salaries that now are over $5,000 was qualified to except instances in which an individual has been assigned to more difficult or responsible work."

In his order to Byrnes to take action so that no salary should be authorized to the extent that it exceeds $25,000 after payment of taxes, the president provided that such action make due allowance "for the payment of life insurance premiums on policies heretofore issued, and required payments on fixed obligations heretofore incurred, and shall make provision to prevent undue hardship."

Saying that "the congress has done its part in helping substantially to stabilize the cost of living," Mr. Roosevelt said in an accompanying statement he was certain that from the effect of the new legislation and his resultant action "substantial stabilization of the cost of living" would "assist greatly in bringing the war to a successful conclusion." He said it also would "make the transition to peace conditions easier after the war."

The president signed the anti-inflation bill into law two hours after the measure had cleared congress. He had rebuked legislators on Thursday for their delay in passing the bill, declaring they had taken three weeks on an important matter involving the war effort and the country's safety.

As soon as its passage was assured yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt consulted his legal, economic, labor, agriculture advisors. The office of price administration prepared directives bringing under federal control prices of farm products hitherto exempt under the law which forbade ceilings over them until they reached 110 per cent of parity.

The president did not get all he wanted from congress but he emerged from his struggle with the potent farm bloc with far wider powers to control agricultural prices than he held before.

PASSING DREAM

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

(Copyright, 1942.)

CHAPTER XI

Jud had not been "called" nor had he enlisted. That he did not speak of it she interpreted as a sign that he did not want to hurt Temple by reminding her. It would be better, she thought, better and healthier if they talked about it and accepted it. Then she would not have to admit her ignorance of his plans when Abby or Paula quite naturally questioned her. But she had learned not to question him on that subject as she had also learned that his old car was no joke to him and that an expensive meal could never be amusing or that if he could not afford good seats at the theater he would not go at all.

When you are first in love, you see no flaws. When they become apparent, they are accepted as tenderly and forgiven as easily as a child's quick anger. As they become a part of a beloved personality you adapt yourself to them. Jud and his little flaws were quite obscure to her by the many highlights that punctuated brilliantly this joyful episode.

She thought of their drive to Baltimore in evening dress to the opera as a highlight and yet no more so than their discovery of some quaint little place where they went for tea or a cocktail, knowing that another Sunday afternoon had been spent together, that it was theirs and that nothing ever could take it away from them.

At times they were lighthearted and happy, making their little jokes between them that they would remember for the rest of their lives. At other times there was a desperation between them that made them quiet and tense. Often she wondered whether it had been like that with her mother and father or whether it was only for those born between wars.

But she had little leisure for analysis or contemplation. Almost every evening she was with Jud and the evenings she was not were given to the care of her clothes or writing home or having dinner with Paula or going to the library with Abby. She was living on strong young nerves and high spirits and a heart that had never been tested. If her mother had known, she would have said that Temple at last "had her teeth into living" and would have feared greatly for her. Her grandmother would have prayed for her, and Allison's curiosity probably would overcome her appetite. Ron would be mildly protective and Fran would want to know about Jud's family.

So the spring days went on . . . and Washington seethed with people and sprang to brilliant illumination at night, seeming somehow to know that its brilliance had to encompass a dark world.

They met in the lobby of the Mayflower one evening in May. Temple arrived first, wearing new clothes—a navy suit with a frilly white blouse and a ridiculous little navy hat top-heavy with flowers and veil, but very becoming. The feel of new clothes heightened her already heightened feelings.

Presently she saw Jud coming through the revolving doors and walking to her.

"Hi!" he said, smiling. "You look nice. But you should have an orchid or two. Come on, I'll get them for you."

"Oh, but I don't . . ."

"But you do."

Later when they were sitting at one of the small tables, he said, "Now it's right. The orchids make it just right."

"You're terribly extravagant. You sent them to me at Easter." But she was happy, exquisitely happy.

He laughed. "Don't tell me I'm spoiling you. You've spoiled me. No Manhattans today, darling. We're having champagne cocktails."

"You weren't paid today."

"You're right . . . But . . . but it's spring and my girl is beautiful and I want to be extravagant. So orchids and champagne cocktails. I . . . I don't have to balance a budget any more. It's wonderful!" He leaned forward, his eyes holding hers on him; his voice was gentle when he asked, "Temple, would a girl wearing orchids and about to drink a champagne cocktail care to dance with a private in the Air Corps of the United States Army?"

He took her hands and lifted her up and she knew that he was guiding her to the floor. When they were there, he took her so firmly that she had no alternative other than to follow him, knowing so well how he danced. The faces about her, many of them interesting, were blurred. The room seemed to be moving and she seemed to be standing still.

They danced their last dance together and they said nothing while they danced. When they returned to the table, the cocktails were waiting. She wondered whether she trusted her hand to lift the glass. It was as though she were drinking champagne at a funeral.

"I'm glad, Jud. When?"

"Well, it was settled today. I'm going to do base work. I'm not going to fly. There's something wrong with my breathing which prohibits my flying at high altitude. Otherwise I'm okay . . . Why are you glad about it?"

"I don't mean that exactly. I mean that I'm glad the suspense is over and I . . . I know. Do you know where you'll be sent? Not far, please . . . please, not far."

"To Florida."

Drinking champagne at a funeral, she thought. "Florida," she said flatly. The muscles in his face were working. "It's terribly far away," she said. You can't cry into champagne . . . Whoever heard of crying into the gayest beverage in the world?

"The climate is swell," Jud said His voice was flat, too.

"When are you leaving?"

"In ten days."

"Ten days? I see . . ."

"I wired my mother to come down. It's easier for her to come down than for me to go home." His mouth pulled at one corner. "It's . . . it's sort of like getting all your affairs neatly in order before you die."

"Don't say that . . ."

"Another of my bad jokes. Sorry."

"I'll come down to see you." By juggling money she could . . . she would.

He smiled. "I knew you'd say that."

"I want to say this, too, before I change my mind . . . about seeing other girls. I expect you to."

"That goes for you, too, and the men here."

"I think it's easier for a girl to be faithful. I think that girls like someone to wait for more than does a man."

"You're judging all of them by yourself and Abby. They're not all like you . . . I want you to meet my mother. I don't know how she'll take this so I can't prepare you for her. I enlisted . . . or did I mention that before?"

"No, you didn't." She put her hand over his. "Jud, the other thing in my life that I wanted so much I gave up kicking and screaming. I won't give you up like that. We are no better than the others who are doing the same thing."

"You're too noble, darling."

"I'm not noble. I'm trying to take the broad view."

* * *

He lifted his glass. "Well, here's to you and memories. But in spite of your great nobility, don't kid yourself. Memories can't make you laugh or talk to you or kiss you or touch you. You can't sit across a table from a memory and have a good time. But for ten more days I won't be a memory. What are you going to do about it, Temple?" Then he said, "Skip it, darling, and let's get out of here after we've had dinner. Yes, dinner here, too. The best they have."

They even managed to be rather light-hearted for a while as though they could anticipate many evenings like this.

"I'll be with you every minute I can," he said.

The next day Jud called to tell her that his mother had arrived and that he was spending the evening alone with her. He asked Temple to meet him and his mother the following evening for dinner.
